

Two barefoot lads of Marion, Ohio, evidently consider the results of next November 4 a foregone conclusion and decorate their humble dwelling with a homemade poster, "Welcome Home President Harding." Senator Harding arrived in his home town last Monday after a motor trip from Washington, and all Marion put on its best clothes, and with fireworks, music and speeches opened its arms in enthusiastic welcome.

Underwood

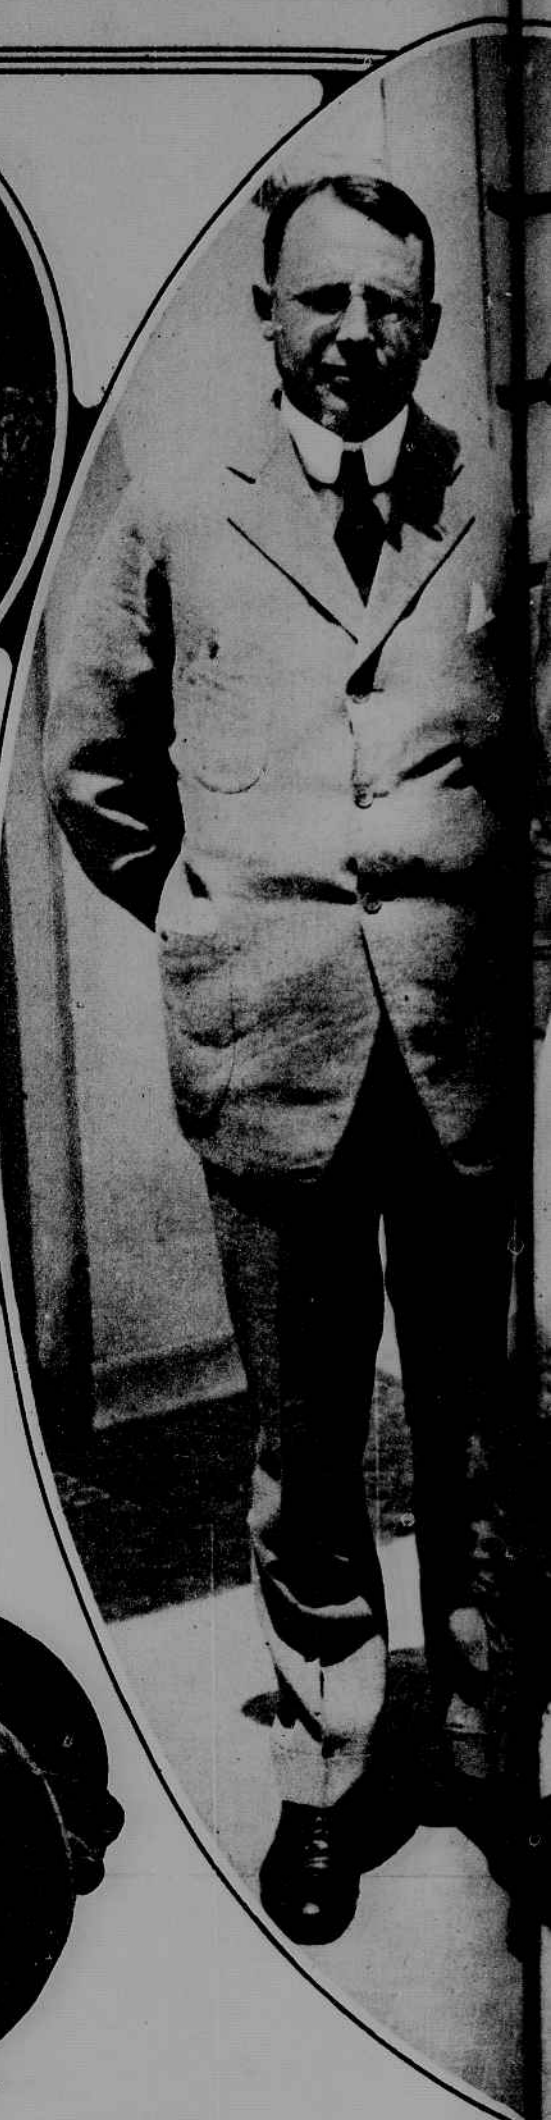

Above — A little known branch of New York City's own army — one of Commissioner Enright's rifle squad of sharpshooting cops in training at Fort Wadsworth. Let's hope we may never have to see these efficient members of the "finest" in real action.

International

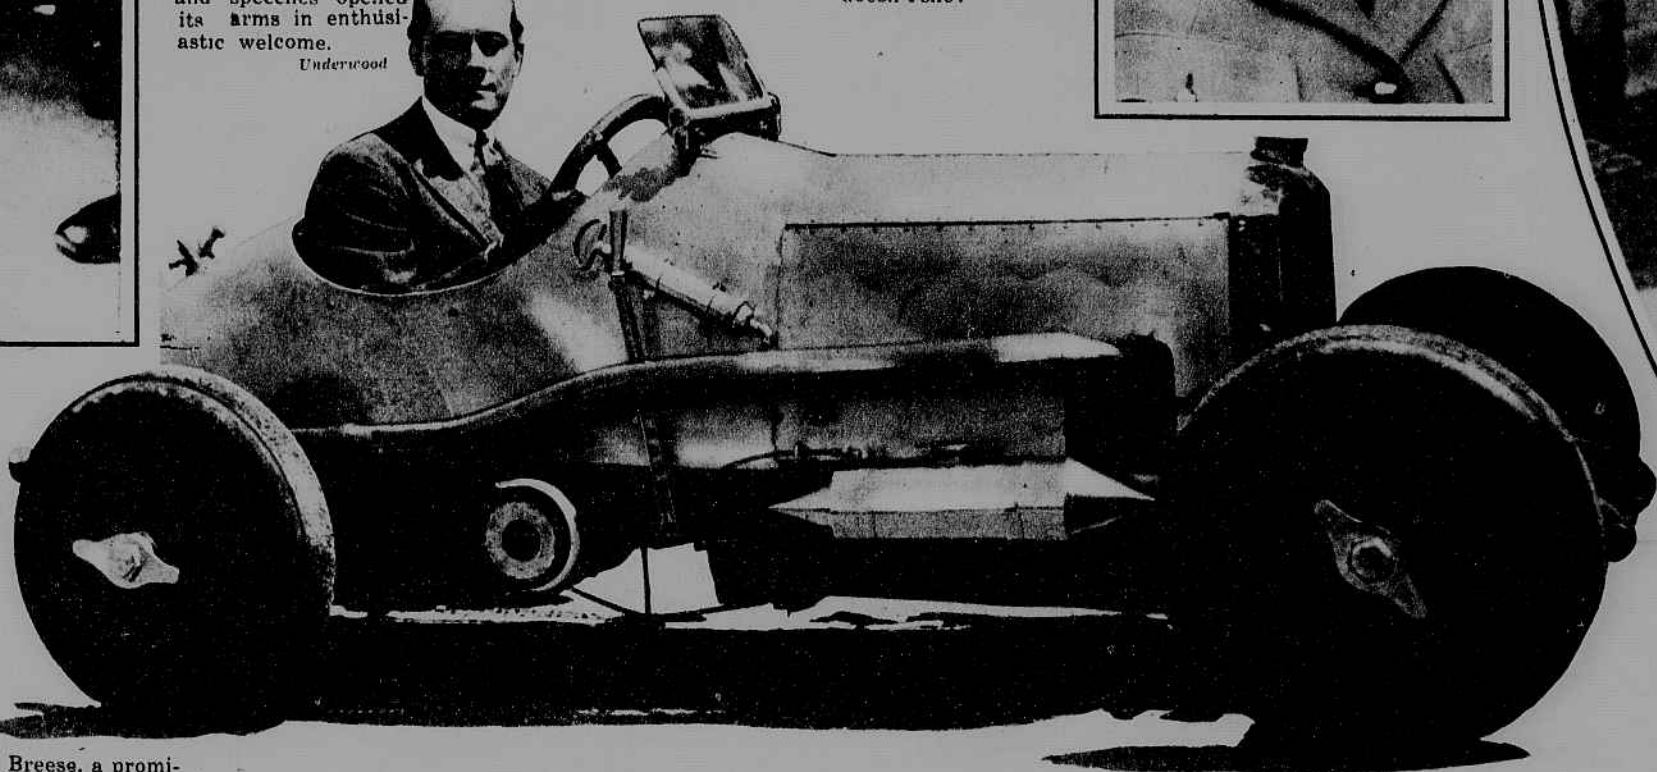

Right — General Leonard Wood's smiling daughter Louise sails on the Savoy for France to engage in reconstruction work. Looks like her dad, doesn't she?

Wide World

Mary and Doug, honeymooning in London, visit the tennis championships at Wimbledon, and Mrs. Fairbanks greets Mlle. Lengler, champion woman tennis player of the world, in true French fashion with a bit of characteristic Pickfordian osculation.

Keystone

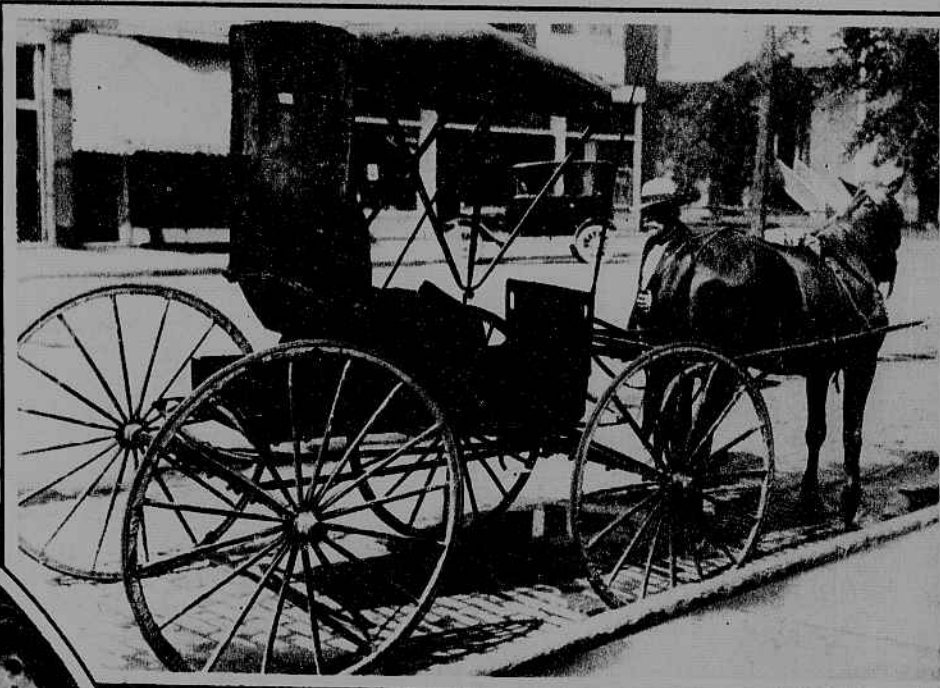

Above — Robert P. Breese, a prominent New Yorker, breezes into Southampton's society Fourth of July at a mile a minute clip in his famous "flying peanut," said to be the smallest racing auto in the world. We'd like to tell you its maximum speed, horsepower, cost and where the driver puts his feet, but we don't know.

Central News

Left — His job is to measure the joints of cooties, count the scales on flies and similar microscopic stunts. He's Dr. H. B. Bradford, illustrator in the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology, and an expert at making bug portraits.

Keystone

Above — The old-fashioned ways are good enough for Dr. G. T. Harding, of Marion, Ohio, father of the Republican Presidential nominee, who is shown here about to step into his buggy (a veritable "one-hoss shay") for a call on one of his patients.

Underwood

Right — Eighteen-year-old Ezra Crane, an Eagle scout, who came all the way from Honolulu to attend New York's Independence Day Boy Scout celebration and to sail Tuesday with some 300 other scouts to engage in various international contests in Antwerp.

Paul Thompson

Left — "Hey, Tom, who's gonna win the race?" Sir Thomas Lipton celebrates the Fourth by entertaining a number of crippled soldiers aboard his private yacht in the lower bay. The boys voted the famous English yachtsman a "regular feller," and he in turn declared the doughboys the cheeriest bunch of disabled fighting men it was ever his pleasure to meet.

Underwood

These two good looking youngsters posing on the runningboard of their dad's car en route to Newport's sandy bathing beach are Miss Olive and Master Charles jr., children of former Governor and Mrs. Whitman of New York.

International

Governor and Mrs. James Blair photographed at the Democratic End, near Dayton. Mrs. Blair is daughter of Thomas S. Blair, wife. They have one child.

"There ain't no such animal!" — but the same. The new arrival is a Guiana, and it's the only beast "Auntie" couldn't bite, for he has a tongue gathering in and munching article of diet.